

BRITISH WORKMAN

PUBLISHED MONTHLY. PRICE ONE PENNY.

BY S. W. PARTRIDGE, AT THE OFFICE OF THE "BRITISH WORKMAN," No. 9, PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON, E.C.

"HERRERT," THE FINE OLD NEBRIAN LION IN THE REGENT'S PARK ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, SKETCHED SHORTLY PRIOR TO ITS DEATH, BY HARRISON WEIR.

It deserves to be made more generally known, that the Zoological Gardens, in Regent's Park, London, are open every Monday* at half-price, viz., SIXPENCE each person, instead of the usual charge of one shilling. We know of no richer treat that a father can give his children, than by taking them to these gardens. Where is the child whose heart will not be gladdened by being allowed to visit this noble collection of wild beasts of the forest,— the birds, and the "creeping things" from all parts of the habitable globe? These gardens present a living "Natural History Book," worthy of study by both old and young. There are thousands of working-men in London, who never do a single stroke of work on "Saint Monday," from one year's end to another; but who spend the day in a manner anything but beneficial to pocket or person. We wish that all such 'sons of toil' would, for

* We hope that before long this regulation will also apply to Saturday afternoons.
